The main differences between the one pager and the game are the fact that I stuck with just using sound for the characters and items. I added more than three items for the character to interact with, and changed them up a bit to match the characters alibis. Whereabouts of the characters were only for the day, but there were clues to help point to who it could possibly be based on the most recent passing.
AI was used to generate furniture, the background, and helped implement character animation and adding sound. I otherwise followed tutorials online to help me implement the other technical aspects of the game.